Mayor Block Was Watched

Members of His Official Family Present Him With Hamilton Gold Watch and Chain Thursday Afternoon at City Hall.

Thursday afternoon at the city hall the members of Mayor Morris Block's official family surprised the mayor by presenting him with a handsome Hamilton gold watch with chain to match as a slight token of the high esteem in which he is held by the members of the city boards and city employes.

The presentation came as a complete surprise to Mayor Block and he responded feelingly, thanking the donors for the gift. The presentation was made by Chief of Police J. Allan Wood who in making the presentation in behalf of the donors said:

"We are all assembled here today for the purpose of taking up with you a matter of quite long standing. A matter which is not discussed enough in the busy routine of life. The matter is in connection with our association with you during your administration as Mayor of our city.

"You have been Mayor of Kingston on three different occasions and have each time held that position with honor. Last fall the people of Kingston decided that it was for their benefit that you again occupy that honored position. We believe that they not only decided wisely but well.

"We, co-workers with you, have found that you carry out the principles of your administration in a clear-cut business way, and we like that way of doing business. Besides doing that you have endeared yourself to the hearts of those whom you have appointed as heads of departments and it is their ambition to see to it that your administration principles are carried out to a successful end as you would have them.

"Theodore Roosevelt said, 'What counts in a man or a nation is not what the man or nation can do, but what he actually does do.'

"We believe that you are administering the affairs of our city in a manner which has firmly established, in you, the confidence of the people of the city of Kingston and you have the admiration and respect of those assembled here today.

"To that end we are here today to do you honor.

"Words, like flowers, are beautiful while they last, and it is the intention of the city officials to present you with something more substantial which even in later years would be a reminder of this occasion.

"Therefore, I present to you this gift from the heads of the city departments as a slight token of their esteem and regard for you. We trust that you will accept it. With it goes their best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year."

Good Year for Auto Industry

President of the Chrysler Corporation Predicts Coming Year Will Be a Good One for the Automotive Industry.

(By Walter P. Chrysler, President of the Chrysler Corporation.)
Written for the International News Service.

New York, Dec. 26.—The coming year will be a good year for the automotive industry.

The confidence with which the automobile business can view 1926 indicates to me that the entire country will enjoy good times during all of the coming year. There was a time when the steel industry was used as an economic barometer. It is still a good one but the automotive industry is equally good if not better because it is closed to the ultimate market. Then, too, think of the industries more or less dependent upon the automotive industry—iron and steel, cement, aluminum, plate glass, leather, rubber, lumber, copper, tin, lead, zinc, nickel, paint and varnish, cotton, wool, etc.

The American automotive industry has just passed through a record year. Everything indicates 1926 will be a good one also.

There is every probability that we shall have lowered taxes. Building operations are going ahead. Labor is fully employed. The agricultural outlook is good.

Material prices may go upward but the public will have increased capacity to buy.

The export market offers greater possibilities than ever to American manufacturers of motor cars.

If every business could look ahead with the same confidence that the automobile can, then we would indeed have cause to fell very optimistic over the approaching year. It will be a good year. Everything indicates that.

BROUGHT CANDLE FROM BETHLEHEM GROTTO

Henry Davis of New York city and Philip Davis of the Episcopal Theological Seminary of Alexandria, Virginia, are spending the Christmas holidays with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joachim Davis at 39 Green street. Philip Davis, who is an ex-service man, has spent some time abroad and was in Bethlehem on Christmas Day last year. He brought home with him as a remembrance of that Christmas celebration one of the tall, white candles burned in the grotto which is supposed to mark the place where Christ was born.

Andrews to View The Rum War

Drive is Planned to Crush Liquor Smuggling—Andrews Will Make Personal Tour of Mexican and Canadian Border.

Wilmington, N. C., Dec. 26.—Backed by the order of President Coolidge that every available resource of the government must be employed for prohibition enforcement, General L. C. Andrews, assistant secretary-treasurer, started plans here today to lay down a blockade of ships, guns and men around the southeastern and gulf coasts to crush liquor smuggling.

With Havana recognized as the main source of supply for smugglers, who are pouring a vast amount of whiskey into the southeast, Andrews prepared to sail this afternoon on the coast guard cutter Modoc for a first hand view of rum running operations.

The survey will complete Andrews's picture of eastern and southern smuggling. Later he will make a personal tour of the Mexican and Canadian borders, and the Pacific coast in order that a comprehensive national program may be drafted to check the rum war.

In Havana, Andrews will confer with the high Cuban officials relative to the negotiation of a rum treaty between that country and the United States. The preliminary steps already have been taken, and it was expected that the pact will be concluded within a few months.

Recommendations reinforcing the government's dry army in the northeast already have been laid before Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, and will be carried out in full force upon Andrews's return to Washington after the New Year.

Use New Auto Plates Sunday

First Day for Use of 1926 Plates—Old Plates Cannot be Used After December 31 Without Making Motorist Liable to Arrest.

Albany, Dec. 26.—Automobile license plates for 1926 will make their appearance tomorrow. The new plates have a blue background with white figures. They have been on sale since November 23 and as an incentive for owners to obtain them early and not wait until the last minute rush, Commissioner Charles A. Harnett has given permission for their use Sunday. After today there will be but four days before the first of the year on which to obtain plates. The 1925 plates die with the present year and the auto driver who ventures out on New Year's day with 1925 plates will subject himself to immediate arrest.

In most of the cities of the state the officials report that the distribution of plates this year is slightly ahead of last year but there are a great many more to be obtained and it is doubtful even in view of the additional facilities furnished by the Motor Vehicle Bureau if all owners who have failed to secure 1926 licenses can obtain them before New Year's day unless they attend to the matter at once.

Putting off application for 1926 license plates until the last day is sure to cause congestion, confusion and personal annoyance, both to automobile owners and the motor bureau force. Troublesome delays will be avoided if car owners will cooperate by making application as soon as possible.

44 Hooch Victims In New York City

New York, Dec. 26.—Forty-four victims of poison liquor written on hospital cots today as the toll of the Christmas drinking here. They refused to heed the warning of prohibition enforcement authorities that 94 per cent of the liquor sold in New York was not fit to drink.

None of the victims will become blind, physicians said, although some were totally unconscious. Stomach pumps and antidotal injections were used to revive them.

Other victims who were poisoned to a lesser degree were able to go to their homes after first aid treatment had been administered to them.

INGENIOUS DEVICE BLOWS OFF PART OF HIS SKULL

New York, Dec. 26.—After he had used an ingenious device in an effort to blow out his brains with a stick of dynamite, according to police, a man believed to be Frank McIntyre of Boston, Mass., was taken to St. John's Hospital in Long Island City in a critical condition today.

The noise of an explosion brought a policeman to an empty lot in Long Island City. What he saw, he reported, indicated that McIntyre, sitting on the ground, had hooked up two wires to a dry battery, one of them to the cap on a stick of dynamite and then formed a circuit by touching the other end of the stick with the second wire. The resultant explosion blew off part of his skull, leaving the front part of his brain exposed.

The man's description was forwarded to Boston authorities, on evidence of papers found in his pockets

Juror Misstated Facts to Lawyer

Misstatements Concerned His Acquaintance With One of the Litigants, So Judge Coffey Sets Aside Jury's Verdict.

Judge James V. Coffey has signed an order setting aside the verdict in the three actions tried last March in the Supreme Court brought by Harry Herschman against Barney Ragovin and Harry Reiner. Two of the actions were for damages for the death of his son Meyer and his wife Esther Herschman, who were killed in an accident on the Marbletown hill in September, 1923, when the Herschman car and a car of the defendant Ragovin and driven by Reiner were in collision. The third is for personal injuries and damages sustained by the plaintiff.

In setting aside the verdict, which was for no cause of action, Judge Coffey, before whom the case was tried, grants the motion on the grounds that one of the jurors who sat on the case made misstatements to the plaintiff's counsel at the time the jury was being selected. In his memorandum Judge Coffey states that the application on behalf of the counsel for the plaintiff is granted on the grounds that the juror Myron Markie made false answers to material questions of plaintiff's attorney in regard to his acquaintance with one of the defendants. In his application for a new trial J. L. Patrie, attorney for plaintiff, sets up the fact that the jurors Markle and Claire made misstatements in regard to their acquaintance with defendant's counsel, Judge William D. Cunningham. The contention that Claire made misstatements is not referred to in Judge Coffey's memorandum.

The three actions were tried together by stipulation of counsel and were tried at the March, 1925, term of the Supreme Court.

All three actions grow out of an automobile crash on the Marbletown hill in September, 1923, when the Star car of the plaintiff was proceeding toward Kingston from Ellenville. When descending the hill near the junction of the Cottekill road, the Buick car of the defendants going up the hill came in contact with the Star car when it is alleged the Star car skidded. The son and wife of the plaintiff were injured and died of the injuries.

The case was tried by Charles Kennedy who appeared for Mr. Patrie's office and Judge William D. Cunningham who appeared for the defendants.

Ragovin was employed as manager of the co-operative supply house at Accord and affidavits filed state that the juror Markie was acquainted with the defendant at the time of and prior to the trial. Ragovin and Reiner were returning home from New York city at the time of the accident. The hill was in bad condition at the time and had been the scene of several skidding motor car accidents. The plaintiff claims that the car of defendants was responsible for the accident and that at the time it was being operated at a high and dangerous rate of speed and in a dangerous manner.

U. S. Destroyers Sent to China

Washington, Dec. 26.—Dispatching of six destroyers from Manila to China with a detachment of marines was ordered by rear admiral, C. S. Williams, commander of the Asiatic fleet, it was declared at the navy department today. Williams has full power so to arrange the naval forces as to afford greatest protection to American interests and is not required to await orders from Washington.

John V. A. MacMurray, American minister to China, with whom Williams is working in closest cooperation, has been ordered by the state department to make a full report to Washington in latest outbreak at Tientsin. Earlier dispatches from MacMurray indicated that the Tientsin situation was improving and that Americans were in no danger.

SANTA CLAUS REMEMBERED SHUTTLE STREET CHILDREN

There are about thirty children residing on Shufeldt street who Thursday afternoon the letter carrier delivered envelopes at all of their homes which when opened contained a crisp new dollar bill and a note reading "Merry Christmas from Santa Claus." Even the parents of the children are unaware of the one who remembered the children in need.

Big Increase in Prisoners Due To Prohibition

State Prison Commission Finds That Prohibition Causes so Many Federal Prisoners That There Is No Room in State Institutions.

Albany, Dec. 26.—The state prison commission is up in arms, claiming the United States government is not paying nearly enough for the support of federal prisoners confined in state institutions.

In a statement issued today, the commission points to the fact that the federal government pays as high as $6 a day for the support of its prisoners in the jails of Alaska, while the rate in this state runs from 36 cents to 99 cents a day.

Because the state institutions are being overcrowded by federal prisoners, the commission is planning to ask the 1926 Legislature to pass a law providing that federal prisoners shall not be taken in penal institutions in this state unless there is plenty of room for them.

Some time ago the commission recommended that the federal government erect in this state its own institution where its prisoners could be detained, pending trial.

Prohibition, the commission says, has had much to do with the big increase in the last few years of federal prisoners in state penal institutions.

"The conditions which warranted the states passing laws for the confinement of U. S. prisoners have been so greatly changed, particularly by the prohibition, immigration and drug control laws of recent years, that it cannot be considered reasonable that the state should undertake to care for all arrests made under these and other laws," said the commission's statement.

"Another matter in relation to the confinement of federal prisoners in county and city institutions is the failure of the government to make proper payment to the counties for the detention of these prisoners. There is no reason why small counties should be required to carry this burden in behalf of the federal government."

The commission also urged that a committee be named to fix a proper rate which the federal government should pay each day for the support of its prisoners.

No Cause in Millens Action

Verdict of No Cause of Action in Contract Case Brought by Barney Millens Against Marcus K. Frank.

A verdict of no cause of action was returned in the action brought in the Supreme court by Barney Millens against Marcus K. Frank of Pittsburgh, an action on contract. The action was brought to recover damages for a breach of contract which Mr. Millens entered into with Mr. Frank for the sale of certain second hand rails. The rails were to be delivered to several places as directed by Mr. Frank who is in the steel and iron business. Several shipments were made and Mr. Frank alleged that the rails received were in bad condition, some so poor that they were rejected by the concerns to which they were shipped from Kingston.

This was the last action tried at the December term of the Supreme court and at the conclusion of the case the court adjourned sine die. Judge Hasbrouck presided at the session of the court this week in the absence of Judge Staley who was unable to complete the term on account of illness in his family.

Auto Hit Fence, 1 Dead, 1 Hurt

William Moore is dead and Earl Gardiner is seriously but not dangerously injured as the result of an automobile accident near Cementon early Christmas morning when the automobile they were in left the road and crashed into a fence. Both men were rushed to the Benedictine Hospital, this city, arriving here about 3 o'clock that morning.

Moore was injured internally and died about an hour this morning, while Gardiner's condition while serious is not considered critical. Gardiner sustained several fractures of one leg, besides other minor injuries.

It was stated at the Benedictine Hospital today that both men were employed at or near Cementon and were employed in the cement plant there.

Asks Additional 'Phone Charges

New York Telephone Company Files Motion Papers to Modify Court Order So As To Collect Additional Charges for Service Throughout New York State.

The New York Telephone Company on Thursday filed motion papers in the United States District Court asking that the preliminary injunction order made by the Court on May 1, 1924, under which a 10 per cent surcharge on local exchange rates is now being made in New York city, be modified so that it may collect additional charges for service. The motion will be argued before three judges on some later date to be fixed by the court. The company in this proceeding is represented by the Hon. John W. Davis, Edward L. Blackman and its general counsel, Charles T. Russell.

The motion is based upon the actual results of the company's operations in the state of New York since the injunction has been in force which show that the company after including in its revenues the moneys derived from the application of the surcharge of 10 per cent in the city of New York now permitted by the terms of the injunction has been able to earn only 3.96 per cent upon the cost of its property devoted to the service in the city and only 4.28 per cent upon the cost of its entire property used in the service throughout the state.

It is alleged that after including the present 10 per cent surcharge now being applied in New York city the level of telephone rates collected there is only 12.9 per cent over the 1914 level of telephone rates while the cost of living has increased 68.5 per cent over the 1914 level.

The company asks that it hereafter be permitted to collect additional charges for its service both in New York city and in the rest of the state. The company claims that this is necessary in order that its revenues may more nearly approximate a fair rate of return pending the final determination of its suit, now being tried before a special master, in which it is attacking the rates last fixed by the Public Service Commission as confiscatory and illegal. The filed papers also show that the suit has been on trial for upwards of fourteen months and that it will take a substantial additional time in which to conclude the presentation of the evidence, due to the size and character of the property which the company asserts has a value largely in excess of $500,000,000.

The papers further show that notwithstanding the inadequate revenues which it has been earning, the company since the commencement of the suit has made an added capital expenditure of more than $92,000,000, for net additions to its property in the state and will also have to make a further capital investment of upwards of $106,000,000, for plant and equipment during the years 1926 and 1927 in order to meet the continual and growing demand for telephone service.

Jilted Bell Boy Kills Himself

Briarcliff, N. Y., Dec. 26.—Despondent because he had been jilted by the girl he loved, Alfred Fraser, 28, formerly of Boston, a bell boy at Briarcliff Lodge here, ended his life today by jumping twenty feet from a porch roof. While several hundred prominent residents of Westchester county and New York were making merry over Christmas at the resort, Fraser spent his time telling his fellow employes of his misfortune.

"I never thought I could feel so bad over a girl," he said. "I think I'll blow my brains out."

His friends thought the depression soon would pass. He completed his tour of duty at midnight. At six o'clock this morning his body was found, his skull and hip fractured, in a flower bed beneath his room. He had died instantly.

BROUGHT TO JAIL FOR FIGHTING BROTHER-IN-LAW

Deputy Sheriff Lynde on Friday brought to the Ulster county jail Emory LeFever of the town of Plattekill to serve 30 days in default of paying $50, a fine imposed by Judge DeWitt Servander of Clintondale. LeFever and his brother-in-law had an altercation and after a fight the former was arrested for assault and found guilty and fined.

Holiday Cases Before Coughlin

Two Had Imbibed Too Much Christmas Hooch and Spent Night in Jail —Other Cases in Police Court.

John J. McDonough and George Kane, the latter residing at 13 Mill street, celebrated Christmas not wisely but too well by imbibing too much Christmas hooch and spent Christmas night in the county jail. This morning in police court Judge Coughlin sentenced John to five days in the county jail and fined Kline $5.

Raymond Post, arrested by Samuel Jacobson on a charge of disorderly conduct around the Jacobson shirt factory, was sentenced to ten days in the county jail.

John Green, arrested by Special Officer Joseph Mitchell for panhandling on Broadway, was given an opportunity to leave town and was discharged.

Joseph Ellish of Newburgh, arrested by Officer Harnen for reckless driving on Railroad avenue was discharged. Ellish ran his car over the lawn in front of Hotel Eichler and then down the Ulster & Delaware railroad tracks. In the car with Ellish were several others from Newburgh.

Following a collision between the cars of Frank Rockwell of Boulder avenue and Richard J. Schick of Eddyville, near St. Joseph's Church Schick arrested Rockwell on a charge of reckless driving. The hearing was adjourned to December 29.

Jewish Center Exercises Sunday

Cornerstone of New Community Center to be Laid With Impressive Ceremonies Sunday Afternoon at 2:30 O'Clock.

The laying of the corner stone of the Jewish Community Center, formerly Mann's Hall, on lower Broadway near Spring street, will occur Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with impressive exercises.

The principal address of the day will be delivered by the Rev. H. Masliansky, the famous Yiddish speaking orator. Another speaker will be Dr. M. Soltz, a director of Jewish Extension Education of the Jewish Welfare Board of New York city.

The committee in charge of the program has arranged one that will be of interest not only to the Jewish community of the city but the public at large who are invited to attend the exercises.

The Lyric Club has been entirely reorganized and is a decided addition to the uptown section of the city.

Three Killed in Cabaret Fight

Rival Gangs Fight It Out in Brooklyn Cabaret Resulting in Three Deaths—"Peg Leg" Leader of "Whitehands" Among Victims.

New York, Dec. 26.—Bloody gang warfare flared up in a tawdry Brooklyn cabaret early today, leaving three dead men in its wake. One of them was "Peg Leg" Dick Lonergan, gunman extraordinary and leader of what is left of the notorious "whitehand" gang and the other two, thus far unidentified, were his followers.

As a result of the shooting twenty detectives are scouring south Brooklyn, hunting the gangsters and their "gun molls" who were in the Adonis Social Club when the guns began to bark. All of them, including the "gun molls," a nickname the gang would have pinned on its women, are wanted for the murders, for there is every indication that the deaths were the climax of a wholesale battle.

Head Split With Axe.

A policeman discovered the triple killings when he stumbled across the body of a man sprawled in the gutter in front of the cabaret. The man's head had been split open apparently with an axe or meat cleaver. There were a dozen bullet wounds in his body. A broad stream of blood led to the entrance of the cabaret, indicating the body had been dragged from there. Inside the cabaret the police found the other two bodies. Lonegan's body was inside the building and his fingers still clutched his gun. Another gun was found on the floor.

The dance hall gave evidence that the patrons had made a hasty flight when the shooting started. A dozen men's overcoats and hats were found in the cloak room, along with a woman's coat, hat and handbag.

Nearby Families Heard No Noise.

Two Italian families live above the dance hall. They denied hearing any shooting. Fury J. Agoglia and Tony Sesso, owners of the club, and Joseph Notol, bartender, were rounded up by the police but they declared they knew nothing of the shooting, having left before the trouble broke out. They are being detained, however, for further questioning.

Police learned that "Peg Leg" and his followers, together with their women friends, entered the club about 1 o'clock and ordered beer. What happened after that is still very hazy but police believe members of a rival gang were present and resented the intrusion of "Peg Leg."

County Democrats Make Selections

Shults for Chairman, Merrihew for Clerk, Schirick for County Attorney—Slate is Subject to Changes Befor Board of Supervisors Organizes in January.

The board of supervisors elected at the November election will assume office the first of January and shortly after that date will meet to organize. Next year's board is made up of 17 Democrats and 15 Republicans.

Already the Democratic members of the new board have held several informal caucuses and decided on some of the more important offices to be filled the first of the year.

The slate as picked by the Democrats is made up as follows:

Chairman of the new board, John C. Shults of Saugerties.

Clerk of the board, Jacob V. Merrihew of Olive, a former member of the board of supervisors.

County attorney, City Judge Harry E. Schirick, chairman of the Democratic county committee.

The office of county attorney has been offered to Judge John G. Van Etten, but he has declined the honor. The caucus then decided on Judge Schirick, although there are several other candidates in the field for the plum. Several of Judge Schirick's close friends say that the judge has stated that he will not accept the office of county attorney, and that fact has revived hope in the breasts of several others who aspire to the job.

It is possible that the slate as selected may not go through as there are a number of candidates and factions in the field who are using strong political pressure to land the plum, to be handed out by the incoming board.

COLD SPRING CASE WON BY CENTRAL HUDSON

The New York state Court of Appeals has rendered a decision denying the application of the Cold Spring Light Heat & Power Company for leave to appeal in the Cold Spring franchise case. This decision by the highest court in the state is the last of a long series of adverse decisions against Cold Spring Light Heat & Power Co., and is regarded as a complete victory for the trustees of the village and for the Central Hudson Company which owns the Phillipstown Corporation.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE REINDEER'S VIEW

The reindeer were getting more and more eager to be off. They were all waiting and in readiness for Santa Claus

At last they were off, and oh, how exciting it was for them.

To be sure, they couldn't see into the houses and they didn't take peeps at the children as Santa did

But they seemed to have a great, general idea of the whole world and where everyone lived, and why shouldn't they, with the great amount of traveling they did?

Then when Santa came out talking about the wonderful children who lived in the different houses they could picture the children as they thought about these different places

There were parts of the country where there were great high mountains all about And other parts where there were valleys, and still others where there were valleys and low hills

Then there were the places by the sea and places on lakes and rivers, many of the rivers and lakes frozen over now.

And then they went to places where it was quite hot and where people would pick flowers right out of their gardens, and go swimming

Oh, the reindeer loved seeing the whole world as they did Other people, so Santa had said, talked a great deal about their travels, but the reindeer knew the whole great world and never talked at all.

Where it was warm they had to move more slowly and they had to allow more time for those parts of the world.

But oh, what fun it was to be the reindeer.

Santa would go rushing across the roofs of the houses and they would dash ahead, of course

Then he would stop and go down the chimney of some darling little white house far out in the country Then he would stop at the next house which perhaps was yellow, and a third which maybe had pretty blue shutters which could just be seen in the starlight.

The country glistened in the colder parts with snow and the houses stood out, lighted by the snow and the stars.

Then Santa would go to cities and there would be great buildings after great buildings he would visit.

In many of these apartment buildings there were no fireplaces so Santa would climb down the fire escapes and manage that way.

And the reindeer would stay above on the roof and look over the city so crowded with houses and buildings and would think to themselves:

"Just a few moments ago we were miles out in the country and now there are so many buildings not one of them seems to have quite enough room.

"And in another few moments or so we'll be out again, maybe crossing the great plains."

Ah, now they were coming to a great, huge house in the country. They had left the city a few moments before and they were far out into the country now.

They knew how to rush along. They had certainly had plenty of practice.

And Santa had often said that one of the truest and best of old sayings was that "practice makes perfect"—in their case at any rate.

He came up now from the house and his face was wreathed with smiles.

"A beautiful collection of letters for me to read later, my reindeer, and sugar for you, my beauties, and the children—I peeped at them. Dears! They were perfect dears!

"I could hardly bear to leave."

And the reindeer smiled to themselves in their dear reindeer fashion as they thought:

"Just what he says when he comes out of every house. What a blessed old dear he is!"

And all over the world, all over where the reindeer traveled, in just a few, few hours, all the children of the world would be saying the very same:

"What a wonderful man is Santa Claus."

Proud of His Organ

Steven, aged six, lived in Illinois, and went to Georgia with his mother to spend the Christmas vacation with his grandparents. Among his Christmas gifts was a mouth organ and he became strongly attached to it. Suddenly he stopped in the midst of his efforts to produce musical sounds from it and exclaimed: "Mamma let's go back home right away, right now! I want papa to see my mouth organ before I break it."

Some Good in It

A farmer surprised his wife by buying two tickets for a whist drive. "But you can't play whist," she said. "No," replied her husband, "but I thought the drive would do us good."

SOMETHING GOOD

When serving a cake for company a little out of the ordinary try

Lightning Cake.—Cream half a cupful of shortening, add gradually one-half cupful of sugar, four beaten egg yolks, three tablespoonfuls of milk and one cupful of sifted flour with one teaspoonful of baking powder. Spread the mixture in a shallow pan and over it spread the frosting—given below Dredge with sugar and cinnamon and bake thirty minutes. For serving, cut into strips about two inches long and one inch wide.

Frosting for Lightning Cake.—Beat four egg whites very light, gradually add three-fourths of a cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of blanched and shredded almonds Spread on the uncooked cake batter, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon and bake.

Thousand Island Dressing.—Beat one-half cupful of olive oil into one cupful of mayonnaise dressing; add one teaspoonful of vinegar, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of paprika, one teaspoonful of chopped pimentoes, the same of green pepper and olives, all chopped fine. Mix the ingredients well, then add gradually one half cupful of chili sauce. This dressing will keep some time if kept in cool place.

Figs With Lemon Sauce.—Soak figs overnight or several hours in fruit juice to just cover, then cook at a low temperature until all the juice is absorbed; add one-fourth of a cupful of lemon juice when the figs are nearly done. Remove the figs, thicken the sauce, chill and serve poured over the figs. Garnish with whipped cream.

New Orleans Pork and Cabbage.—Take two pounds of the shoulder of pork as lean as possible. Shred one hard cabbage and place in the bottom of a greased kettle. Season the cabbage with salt, pepper, adding a teaspoonful of mustard seeds, one-half cupful of vinegar and one teaspoonful of brown sugar. Put the pork on top well-floured and bake well covered for three hours.

Get Along Without Fork in Abyssinia

The following is a description of entertainment given the servants of a traveler in Abyssinia in which raw meat formed the menu. Eight of the leading members of the caravan who had been invited to the feast entered and seated themselves in a circle on the dirt floor of the house Two of the chieftain's servants then entered, bearing a sheep suspended from a long pole. The carriers stood outside the circle. The visiting men pulled out their knives and cut off strips of flesh until they were satisfied. Little more than a skeleton remained when they had finished. The usual method of eating is to remove a large piece of meat attached to a bone. The bone is held in the hand and with the knife a small piece of meat is loosened by a cut from the base of the chunk. The piece is not entirely severed, but remains attached at the tip. The loose end is then grasped in the teeth and the other end freed with a second upward cut. To an observer it appears that the diners are in constant and imminent danger of severing the ends of their noses."

Teofus

Teofus say to old Chief Cut Plug of Flatfoot tribe: "How about some valuable glass beads which I will trade you for fox pelts?"

Chief laugh and say: "Teofus, I told you that is old stuff since before the time of Chief Complainter. You cannot fool educated Indians with glass beads But since you are so full of business, lemme sell you some building lots in Fort Mink."

"Lots in tamarack swamp," say Teofus.

"They may be a little damp."

"Four feet of water. That is how damp they are."

Chief grin and walk away.

"That Indian will do me," say Teofus, "if I not watch out. He is unscrupulous." — Louisville Courier-Journal

TO SING ANCIENT CAROLS AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Those who are interested in beautiful Christmas Carols, artistically rendered, will be pleased to know that the choir of St. John's Church, Wall street, will present a program of ancient and modern carols at the four o'clock service on Sunday afternoon. The choirmaster has gone far afield in his search for suitable material for this service, and the choir has spent weeks in most careful preparation. A cordial invitation is extended to the music lovers of Kingston, and it is hoped that many will be able to attend. This service should in no way be confused with the Sunday school festival, held on Monday evening.

The program for the carol afternoon service follows:

Prelude—Noel.....Bossi
Processional — Hark! the Herald Angels Sing .....Mendelssohn
Carol after the First Lesson; When Christ Was Born of Mary Free.... Stokovski
Carol After the Second Lesson; O'er the Cradle of a King.Breton Carol
Carol, (choir and congregation)—O Little Town of Bethlehem..Redner
At the Offertory, the Eve of Grace..Matthew Carols After the Offertory—
A Christmas Song.....Hamlin
Angels, We Have Heard on High.. Old French
Slumber Song of the Infant Jesus Gevaert
Shepherds, Shake Off Your Drowsy Sleep!.....Besancon Carol
Silent Night.....Gruber
Vesper Carol, Infant so Gentle..... Gascon Carol
Recessional, It Came Upon the Midnight Clear.....Willis
Postlude, Noel Polonais....Guilmant

PASSPORT FEES.

The war has been over more than seven years and there has long been witnessed something like a return to "normalcy," but excessive passport fees are still in force The American going abroad must pay not only $10 to the State Department for a passport but $10 for a consular visa for each of the countries he intends to visit The passport expense for most travelers to Europe totals from $20 to $40 This is a serious matter to the majority going abroad, and particularly to the teachers, students and other persons of limited means who in the last year or two have eagerly taken advantage, or desired to take advantage of the summer "tourist cabin" rates offered by transatlantic lines Many thousands of persons of moderate means who would like to take advantage of these offers of round-trip fares of $155 and up in order to procure educational and health-giving recreation are made to hesitate or abandon the proposed journey by the necessity of paying so much for a passport and the same amount for each country visited

Though our government originated the system, which foreign countries adopted, it is not now wholly to blame, and, after much negotiation, has finally arranged with Germany, Sweden, Switzerland and the Central American republics—14 in all—for reciprocal abandonment of the tax. Similar agreements are still to be reached with the most important countries and the most visited—Great Britain, France and Italy—and negotiations with these ought to be pushed to conclusion. On the whole passport requirements are now less formidable than they were, but with the war so many years behind us it is high time for pre-war conditions to be restored.

BETTER SERMONS WANTED.

There has been much complaint from the clergy that Sunday newspapers, golf, motoring, etc., keep people away from church. In a recent address to ministers the Archbishop of Canterbury rather bluntly suggested that there might be another and more important explanation He said that "our Church of England sermons have not kept pace with the educational advance," and he advises burning the midnight oil in order to produce "thoughtful and painstaking" efforts wherewith to combat the lure of outside attractions. In a word, he recommends better sermons as a promising experiment He expressed the conviction that more attention must be paid to the quality of the sermon if it is to meet "the increased intelligence, thoughtfulness and knowledge possessed by the average citizen," and he made the charge that the average of pulpit oratory has fallen much below its level in times past.

Presumably the Archbishop meant real sermons—not political addresses, advocacy of prohibition, evolution, pro and con, the younger generation, the tendencies of the modern novel, the movies and the stage. The most noticeable change in this country is in the direction of short addresses more or less concerned with current topics in lieu of the earnest religious discourses of the past. The Archbishop of Canterbury seems to be of the opinion that the way to bring people to church is to give them something to think about and take to heart, not to "scrap" the sermon and largely depend on music or other forms of entertainment. The reform he would like to bring about in England might prove to be worth the experiment in this country also.

The skating during the Christmas holidays described in "Pickwick Papers" caused Charles Dickens to be accused of something like nature-faking, but if he had been still on the scene in the late autumn of 1925 he could have pointed to skating in England nearly a month earlier. Still other signs of an early cold wave in Europe have been reported of late, such as the ravages of wolf packs in Serbia and the siege of Belgium villages by maddened wild boars. The notable prediction of a French priest, who is also an astronomer, that the [illegible] will, in several centuries, [illegible] appears to be on the way toward verification by the event in Europe, if not in America. With a stubborn coal strike on, involving widespread suffering at best, it is to be hoped that we shall be spared.

Young women claiming damages for injury in railway travel should beware of handsome strangers. One turned up in the home town of a Western girl who was bringing suit for $65,000 against the Chicago & Alton Railroad, paid her marked attention, joined in her sports, and photographed her many times in the course of her athletic feats. Then he said goodbye, omitting the expected proposal of marriage, and his testimony, together with the photographs, worked havoc with her case against the railroad

CLEARING UP FEARS.

During murder trials where the defense lawyers put up the plea of insanity or mental "unbalance," the word psycho-analysis is used frequently, and perhaps you wonder just what it means

The name explains itself, because psycho-analysis is just an analysis or examination, of the mental processes

Sometimes you have found yourself in deep though about a matter that you hadn't thought about in years. You wonder whatever started you thinking about it at all, and then gradually you trace back your thoughts step by step until you get to the point where you began thinking about this particular matter.

Now in a person with a sick mind, one who is in fear of the dark, the open places, high places, the water, fire, and so forth the psycho-analysist questions and questions until he gets to the starting point of that particular fear He can't always get it, just as you sometimes fail as you try to remember the first time you found you disliked lemon pie, custard, apples, olives and other articles of food

The psycho-analysist in questioning these mental cases tries to take the patient's mind back step by step, or as some one has well put it, to "unwind" or untangle the threads of thought, and when this is done to try and have the mind wind itself correctly.

This means removing fears, oppressions of various kinds, or actual obstacles from the patient's mind, and to develop his natural courage or strength of mind.

Like everything else psycho-analysis has been sometimes overdone, but the idea behind it, that is the unwinding or disentangling of the brains wrong viewpoints must appeal to us all as being only a common sense method of treatment

Beautiful Mosaic

Pliny's doves is a superb and perfectly preserved specimen of ancient mosaic in the Capitoline museum at Rome. It is described in Pliny's writings, and is on that account called "Pliny's Doves." This mosaic, representing four doves in the act of drinking, was discovered in the Villa Adriana in 1737 by Cardinal Furietti, and was purchased from him by Pope Clement XIII for the museum of the capitol. The stones composing it are so minute that, on an average, 160 pieces are required to cover one square inch. —Kansas City Star.

150 YEARS AGO

The Origin of the U. S. A.

By Jonathan A. Rawson, Jr.

LITTLE RHODY'S TORY XMAS.

Rhode Island may be little on the map, but it was large in attentiveness to British tailors throughout the Revolution. Along its long shoreline on Narragansett Bay were many fertile farms whose flocks of sheep and herds of cattle looked very good indeed to English fars who were always hungry for fresh meat. The rebellious colonies had as yet no navy with which to keep the King's ships out of the bay Hence there were many raids by British sailors on Rhode Island farms, constant demands for provisions which had to be granted or trouble would follow, and, to make matters still worse, there were many Tories who were more than willing to tell the enemy where provisions could be found in order to gain protection for themselves

The busiest man in Rhode Island on the Christmas of 150 years ago was General Charles Lee of the Continental Army Washington had sent him there to put the colony in a state of military defense against the British sailors. In this task he had some success, thanks mainly to the zeal and resourcefulness of the colony's militia But what was to be done with the Tories? Only one thing seemed possible and that was as we would say today to put them under bonds to preserve the peace, which then meant to cease giving aid and comfort to the enemy Even Tories might be men of honor Perhaps even they would remain true to a pledge Therefore they were told to sign this "iron-clad oath" or take the consequences

"I, ———— here, in the presence of Almighty God as I hope for ease, honor and comfort in this world, and happiness in the world to come, most earnestly, devoutly, and religiously swear, neither directly nor indirectly to assist the wicked instruments of ministerial tyranny and villany, commonly called the King's troops and navy by furnishing them with provisions or refreshments of any kind unless authorized by the Continental Congress or the Legislature, as at present established in this particular colony of Rhode Island. I do also swear by the same tremendous and Almighty God, that I will neither directly nor indirectly convey any intelligence, nor give any advice to the aforesaid enemies so described, and that I pledge myself, if I should, by any accident, get the knowledge of such treason, to inform immediately the Committee of Safety. And as it is justly allowed, that when the sacred rights and liberties of a nation are invaded, neutrality is not less base and criminal than open and avowed hostility I do further swear and pledge myself, as I hope for eternal salvation that I will, whenever called upon by the voice of the Continental Congress, or that of the Legislature of this particular colony, under their authority, take arms and subject myself to military discipline in defense of the common rights and liberties of America. So help me God"

One hundred and fifty years ago today General Lee was counting his signed oaths Only three Tories had elected to take the consequences. They were straightway put in jail. All others had signed.

Slam at Patent Lighter

H. G Wells is responsible for the following story: At a certain fancy dress ball all the costumes were intended to represent names of famous books The majority of book titles were promptly recognized, but everyone was puzzled by the costume of one charming young lady. It was designed to look like a patent cigarette lighter. All sorts of titles were suggested, but to each one the girl shook her head Finally, someone ventured to ask her outright the title of the book represented by her dress. "Why!" she laughed "Don't you see? It's 'The Light That Failed'"

Make your home worth $1500 more

Try to borrow money on a house that still relies on old-fashioned stoves for warmth. You'll be surprised at its low loan value. Install radiator heat. Then, ask your banker for a loan on the same property. Its value will have increased several hundred dollars—much more than the cost of the improvement.

Radiator heated houses are easier sold or rented because people appreciate comfortable, economical, clean and steady heat. Radiators save space in crowded rooms and are far safer; especially where children are.

Those who realize the desirability of radiator heat are gladly willing to secure it. Why not let us install it in your home; at far less cost than the increased property value would be?

Children gain Strength and Weight with LINONINE

This, delicate and sickly children soon regain better health, increase in weight and get back their healthy color when given Linonine. This pure, safe emulsion of flax seed oil puts an end to nasty coughing, restlessness, and troubled sleep. It creates appetite, builds new strength and provides the nourishment necessary to fight off the weakening coughs and colds that keep the child half sick all the time. Linonine is pleasant to take—as sweet as cream—easily assimilated and does not upset the stomach. Try one bottle and you will see an improvement.

MANY CRATERS ON UNIMAK ISLE

Often Causes Great Confusion in Locating Various Eruptions.

Washington.—While America faces a coal shortage this winter, prospectors in the interior of Alaska are anxiously awaiting the end of summer-like weather, so the rivers may freeze and they can make their way out. Unusually high temperatures for November followed the reported activity of Mount Shishaldin, a volcano on Unimak island.

"Unimak island, the largest of the Aleutian 'stepping stones,' is a focus of volcanic activity second only to the Katmai district, scene, in 1912, of one of the greatest volcanic eruptions the world has known," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society. "Although it has an area only a little larger than Rhode Island, so many craters occur on Unimak island that there is often a great deal of confusion as to the location of the various eruptions reported.

Fujiyama's "Double."

"Mount Shishaldin, the peak recently reported active, is the most striking and beautiful of the eleven major craters of the island. It has one of the most nearly perfect cones in the world, seeming to float suspended in the air above its cloud-girt base. Because of its white symmetry it has been called the most formidable rival of the celebrated Fujiyama. Fortunate, however, is the visitor who has seen this Alaskan queen in all her beauty, for most of the year Unimak, and the rest of the Aleutians, are enveloped in a heavy blanket of fog and low-lying clouds.

"Despite Unimak's size and its separation from the mainland 'panhandle' of Alaska by only a narrow strip of water, it is of little importance. There are no good harbors around its shores.

"Cod fishing on the great banks to the south of the island, which are similar to those of Newfoundland, and the mining of small quantities of sulphur and pumice stones are the principal industries. The inhabitants are mostly the remnants of the original native tribes found here by the Russians in the Eighteenth century.

"There is no tourist trade, partly because there are no accommodations for them, but mainly because the beauties of the island can be seen to advantage with binoculars on shipboard. West coast steamers bound for Nome and other places on the Bering sea, or for the Arctic ocean pass almost around the island, for the narrow strait separating it from the mainland is not as safe as Unimak pass, the strait between it and the rest of the Fox group.

"Like its sister islands Unimak is in general desolate and scraggy along its rocky, grass-covered lower slopes. It is treeless, and, except for its heavy rainfall and fogs, has a delightful climate. Summers in Unimak are cooler than places farther north, while in winter the weather is milder than that of Tennessee or Kentucky, twenty degrees of latitude farther south. The warm Japan current, which sweeps up the coast of Asia and around the Aleutians, gives it a January average of 30 degrees above zero.

"Grasses of all kinds grow in abundance on the lowlands all year round but the climate is too damp to mature grain. Although the soil is rich being composed of a vegetable mold mixed with volcanic ash, the land is rugged and there are no places where farms of any size can be made. Small though the island is, the interior has never been thoroughly explored, and reports of a lake of sulphur in solution there have never been confirmed.

On Direct Route to Japan.

"Unimak and other islands of the Aleutian chain, believed to be the route by which man first migrated to the Western hemisphere, should be better known to the world at large, for they are on the shortest route between our northwestern states and Japan. The great expanse of the Pacific and the curvature of the earth place Yokohama almost due northwest of Seattle, if one follows the most direct path.

"The American world flyers remember Unimak as part of one of the most difficult stages in their globe-circling trip. Port Moller, the community to which Major Martin made his way on foot after his plane crashed, is about 150 miles farther east. The district presented the same pitfalls for aviators as Unimak, conical peaks and sharp ridges rising suddenly out of dreary fog-hidden tundras and marshes.

"In addition to Mt. Shishaldin, Unimak has several other exceptional peaks. Pogromni Volcano, the mile-high sentinel of Unimak pass in the western part of the island, today is but the broken shell of a vast crater which is said to have 'burst' in 1795. Other violent eruptions are reported between 1827 and 1880. Lately it has been a very well behaved volcano. A thin, slow wisp of smoke is a constant reminder, however, of its lurid past. The Isanotsky peaks are credited with a violent eruption within the last century, but, as is the case with so much of the rest of the history of the island, there is no confirmation. Their appearance suggests a long period of erosion rather than frequent activity."

Daring Communists

Two men dressed in workers' clothes drilled a large hole in the marble statue of William I on the main street in Breslau, says the Pathfinder Magazine. The job took most of the day, but no notice of the men was taken until they had finished the work. Police then became suspicious and learned that they were Communists preparing to blow up the monument.

Blackberry Superstition

In many parts of rural England there is an ancient superstition that blackberries must be gathered before September 20, for on that date every year the devil leaves his mark on the berries which are still growing, and people foolish enough to pick the fruit after that date are certain to fall into the hands of his satanic majesty.

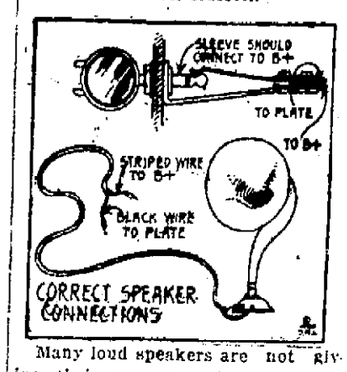
The Radio Column

LOUD SPEAKER OPERATION.

Correct Connections to Plug Important.

F. M. Russell.



Many loud speakers are not giving their owners satisfaction. The volume is weak and the tone quality poor. This is not always the fault of the speaker. Very often a change that requires about ten seconds to make will increase the volume from 20 to 30 per cent and improve the tone quality 100 per cent.

You will notice that one of the leads from the speaker is striped or a solid red color, while the other is plain. There is a reason for this. The striped lead should always be connected to the B plus, while the plain lead should go to the plate.

Most jack plugs are marked to show which is positive and which is negative. The sleeve generally goes to the contact spring on the jack connected to the B plus while the tip connects to the contact going to the plate.

If the plug is not marked then try the effect of reversing the position of the tips. This will quickly show you when the connections are correct. If you use the speaker for any length of time with the polarties reversed, it will demagnetize the magnets and in time ruin the speaker.

Some speakers rattle badly when delivering any volume. If your speaker behaves in this way, try the effect of putting a .006 mfd. condenser across the B plus and plate at the jack. You will probably find it improves the quality a great deal.

BYPASSING R. F. CURRENTS

Improves Tone Quality and Stabilizes Set.

(F. M. Russell)

There are a number of places in a receiver where by-pass condensers should be used to help improve its operation. By pass or blocking condensers keep the radio frequency currents in the part of the circuit where they belong. If the radio frequency or high frequency currents stray into the audio frequency or low frequency part of the circuit, you will get howls and noises and generally poor performance from your set. In fact if very much radio frequency gets through to the audio you may not be able to operate the receiver at all.

By pass condensers should be used across any part that has a high resistance or impedence to provide an easy path for the radio frequency current. A by pass condenser should always be provided across the A and B batteries. When the batteries are new the resistance is not extremely high, but after they have been in use for some time, this resistance rises rapidly and some means must be provided to counteract this effect. A fairly large capacity must be used from ½ to 2 mfd. The larger the better. Connect the condenser between the 45-volt plus and the negative filament and between the 90-volt plus and the negative filament. Even with a new battery, these condensers will improve reception but their effect will be particularly noticeable with batteries that have been used a short time.

Use good quality condensers and make sure they are not leaking. To test for leakage connect a 90-volt battery across the condenser for a few seconds, then after setting aside for about 15 minutes, touch the condenser contacts with a pair of phone tips. If there is no click heard in phones then the condenser is leaking. If, however, you hear a click, it is O. K.

The next place a blocking condenser should be tried is across the primaries of the audio transformers. Very often a small amount of radio frequency current will get through from the detector and will pass through the primary of the transformer unless an easier path is provided for it. A condenser of from .0025 to .01 should be used. The best value will be found by trying various capacities.

Nutty Natural History

By HUGH HUTTON.

THE SENEGALESE YOWLER.

Travellers on the excursion steamers up the Senegal River are often awakened in the night by ear-splitting yells from these small ape-like bipeds swinging from the ko-ko trees. Their chest capacity is small, and the immense volume of sound is obtained through a feedback circuit and audio frequency amplification. The yowler cannot travel well on the ground, but swings at great speed through the branches, and the leaps are so long that if he misses, he usually lands somewhere north of Timbuctoo.

The filbert is a dual purpose nut here, as it answers both for the head and body. Split beans form the ears, and popcorn does well as a nose, while a clove makes a satisfactory tail. Hands are split navy beans, and feet are split lima beans. The connecting parts are toothpicks. The mouth is an ink spot, or it can be drilled out on a bench lathe.

THE GIANT JIGGERWURT.

Since the advent of civilization in Abyssinia the natives have attempted to domesticate the jiggerwurt for hauling milk wagons, but the idea has been only partially successful. In the first place, two milkmen are required to haul up the heavy anchor that holds the jiggerwurt while they deliver the milk. The jiggerwurt jumps along at such an irregular gait that the milk is jerked into butter in twenty minutes, so the milk routes have to be quite short. The Abyssinian Chamber of Commerce has recently communicated with the American Museum of Nutty Natural History for advice on more efficient use of jiggerwurt-power.

The jiggerwurt shown here with his anchor has a pecan body and single peanut head, with split almond kernels for ears. Neck and tail are toothpicks, while the legs are spaghetti. The feet are split peanuts, and the tail balancer is a raisin.

"OPERA GHOST" AT AUDITORIUM NEXT WEEK

"The Phantom of the Opera," Lon Chaney's much-heralded successor spectacle to "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," and one of the most daring departures in screen portrayals ever attempted, will be at the Auditorium Theater all next week.

Lon Chaney plays "The Phantom," a strange creature of the shadows, in a makeup that eclipses his weird disguise as "Quasimodo" in the Hugo classic. Mary Philbin plays the opera singer whom he kidnaps into his underground stronghold, and Norman Kerry plays her lover and rescuer.

A remarkable cast is seen in the principal roles, and fully four thousand people take part in the mob scenes, the brilliant spectacles on the Grand staircase of the Opera and the gala performance of "Faust" staged in the opera house proper.

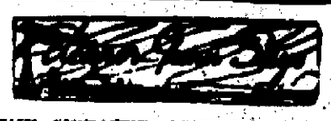
In the cast are Virginia Pearson, Gibson Gowland, Snitz Edwards, Cesare Gravina, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Alexander Bevani, Anton Vaverka, George B. Williams, Edward Cecil, and many other noted screen players.

UNLAWFUL TO KILL SWANS ANYWHERE IN UNITED STATES

The ten-year close season during which swans may not be hunted anywhere in the United States expires December 7, 1926. This restriction was made under the provisions of article 3 of the treaty between the United States and Great Britain enacted for the protection of birds migrating between the United States and Canada. The Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture, which makes this announcement, says that the Federal law to enforce the treaty also prohibits the taking of migratory birds except as permitted by regulations thereunder promulgated by the president. Therefore, even with the end of the ten-year close season, it will still be unlawful to kill these birds at any time, until the migratory-bird treaty act regulations are amended to allow the "killing of swans" during a stated open season. An exception, however, under permit of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Glazing Furs

Furs are glazed by dipping a soft brush in cold water and brushing in the way of the fur. Allow to dry without brushing.



THE SWEATER ASSUMES SOMETHING OF ITS OLD STATUS—AND IS MOST ORIGINAL IN DESIGN

One needs no excuse to wear sports clothes, with Patou and other creators approving the substitution of wool sweaters for other jumpers and overblouses. There is for all the elegance of the mode, a good deal of which is casual, and in this category may be mentioned the sweater, which, after a season of disuse, has returned and in rather strange company. Not that a tweed or novelty woolen skirt is strange companionship for a wool slip-on, but one is not yet accustomed to meeting up with a wool sweater on the removal of a coat in a smart restaurant. True, it was demonstrated at Paris openings that it was a possible mode. For those who like a compromise there are slip-ons of balbriggan and heavier jersey—usually, but not always, high necked, and in contrasting color to the suit.

European women, being nearer the source of woolen novelties, wear more knitted things than are usually seen in America. At the moment the knitted full length or three-quarter coat, in tapestry or carpet effect is regarded as a topcoat worthy of any occasion.

These are in high colorings and often bound with black. There are also novelties in wool coat sweaters, which include not only brilliant floral motifs knitted in either side of the front, but raised floral embroidery across or up and down the sweater. Indications are that when planning one's southern or summer wardrobe, as well as getting ready for winter sports, the sweater must be well toward the head of the list, and the knitted sports coat may be considered in all its daring color and design. After the fever of blanket coats, which spread like wildfire over the land, one should not shy at the brightest knitted garments.

That While Modern Chic is Expressed in Angles, Curves Too Have Their Place.

Although modern fashion prefers to express itself in angles, curves are by no means frowned down. There are yokes which curve, and certainly there are long, almost molded bodices which have a series of curved arches from which are hung the circular panels or the circular skirt. There are frocks in tiers, these being sometimes scalloped and sometimes slashed, and there are dresses galore with carving front panels. To offset this there are angles and angles and angles, diagonal folds and drapings, prints which have designs which dart out at one in brilliant colors and zigzag designs. There are insert and other attenuated V's, deep handkerchief points and patches which are set as a mosaic.

One of the best and at the same time worst features of the season is that one is given such quantities of rope with which to hang oneself. There are so many ways of going wrong sartorially. One designer may mix purples and reds until one could cry out with joy at their glory, while a copyist whose eye for color is not so sure may set one's teeth almost on edge. Reds and purples, also cerise and purple are popular combinations, which have an ecclesiastical suggestion, perhaps unfair. Coming down the steps of the Vatican recently came a group of Roman prelates wearing robes which were rich in ideas for the modern woman. They were of deep purple cloth, almost blue, like a sun ripened grape, and opened from a standing collar of the cloth, over a panel of the same, this buttoned the entire length of the robe with red silk buttons. There are many ecclesiastical notes in modern fashions, just as there are many ideas which originated in men's attire. The modern man finds his best buildings being bought up by women who realize the chic of the well worn, or the double breasted lounge coat, or short jacketed suit.

Generalities on Present Day Fashions Apply to Us All.

By Eleanor Gunn.

Violet Blue Matched in Fur Trimmings Is a Very New Color Note for Milady's Costume.

The world is so full of a number of things, that selection is doubly difficult this season. One has a hesitancy in wearing what everyone else wears though it be good style, yet there are certain prescribed lines which must be adhered to. For instance, if you do not care for the small allover patterned woolens, which are so lightweight as to be capable of the manipulation of crepe, there is kasha, no longer a novelty but a staple, velveteen, velvet or duvetyn. One cannot very well be without one or all of these materials, just as one cannot be without a velour hat, even though one has many felts, and should not get along without a velvet one, if one subscribes to the law of wearing velvet on occasions.

It may be that the far-sighted see a return of the large hat, but it takes binoculars for most women to discover the reason for their return not with high collars and skirts which swing clear of the ground by feet, not inches, even though they are full. One cannot, of course, if they aim for a well balanced wardrobe, get along without a two-piece frock or an assortment of them, some sports clothes, including knitted things, or a cape for evening either of velvet lame or fur or a combination of two or three of these delectable materials.

There must be variety in handbags, including the large pouch type, so popular with the traveler, and including also smart looking novelty leathers carefully matched up to one's gloves or shoes.

Gloves have a comfortable way of being roomy with outside stitching and slipping over the hand. There are more formal types, of course, but this is the preferred model for most of life's pursuits, and in neutral shades frequently chosen to fraternize with the hosiery. There must be a tailored suit or coat in the wardrobe, and a separate for scarf to top it, and there must be shoes of every conceivable shade repeated in the costume. Otherwise, how can one hope to be chic, a state desired above mere prettiness or, of course, comfort.

Little Known Burma

Kachin Women of Burma.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

THE recent arrangement for the liberation of several thousand slaves in a remote corner of Burma serves to show how little is known of this country, almost as big as Texas, which is governed with India and yet is in many ways a country apart. The average tourist landing at Rangoon, rushing by train up to Mandalay, down the Irrawaddy river by boat, and back to his ship, sees practically nothing of the real Burma and its people. His guide is probably a Hindu of low caste; all the gharri drivers are Indians; and many shop-keepers are from India or Armenia. Some Burmese there are (in the small shops you find their women), but they are quite up to date.

The commercial development of Burma has been for the most part Scottish. It is British but not English, and therein lies a distinction familiar to all who know England and the English. One arrives in Burma only via English settlements and by English steamers, and usually without that enthusiastic interest which disposes one to incur discomfort and to overcome difficulties.

Burma is governed as a department of India, since her taxes are all paid into the Indian treasury; and her Scottish residents complain bitterly of the policy which doles out such funds as are appropriated for local improvements and the development of the country. Nothing has been done in the way of road building except for a few miles around Rangoon. There are no good roads in fact and no spring wagons outside the large towns. For conveyance in the country there are only the bullock carts.

The Burmese have not reached the stage of development requiring hotels; hence there are no Burmese hotels. Those in the large towns, for foreigners and supported by foreigners, are bad and very dear.

How to See the Real Burma.

Yet Burma is a country of surpassing interest, and once outside the tourist's triangular path, bounded by Rangoon, Mandalay and Prome (none of which is typically Burmese), one may journey at will among a simple, happy, kindly people, still very young and wholly unspoiled by contact with the West. It is a country of mystery, where nats (nature spirits) still dwell in mountains, trees, streams and temples; a country inhabited by many tribes, widely diverse in customs and physical characteristics, living as they lived 1,000 years ago; tribes among which the Burmese are only one, but happened to be in the ascendant at the moment of England's conquest of the country.

Much of this country may be reached by the Irrawaddy and its estuaries, where a comprehensive service is established. For such a journey only a single servant is necessary, as in India or Ceylon.

For a more extended journey, involving the necessity of leaving the waterways, some provision must be made. A bedding outfit will be needed, as well as cooking utensils and some supplies.

Thus equipped, an extremely interesting journey may be made—for instance, through the Shan states northward to the ruby mines or the oil fields, thus passing through the country of several interesting peoples. The weather, except for a few rainy days at Christmas time, is good for the most part from December to March.

Dak bungalows are to be found nearly everywhere, though often only shelters and not always provided with crockery and cooking utensils. There are many very comfortable "circuit houses" built for and used by the government officials, who are very courteous to any properly accredited travelers.

On the other hand, though on land one must travel in the saddle or by bullock cart, the Irrawaddy river and its estuaries offer a superb highway with an adequate steamboat service.

Up the Irrawaddy by Boat.

Going up the Irrawaddy, there is nothing of special interest below Mandalay except the ruins of Pagan, which richly repay a visit. Here, scattered over a considerable area (some eight miles along the river and two miles wide) lie the ruins of a city the story of whose building and decay vies in romantic interest with that of Carthage. Here were once thousands of pagodas, some very beautiful; and a few, in a fair state of preservation, still exhibit the varied styles of the peculiar architecture of the time and country. Excavations in recent years have uncovered some very interesting buildings.

At Mandalay begins a journey into the country of the hill tribes, at war with each other till within a few years. It is said that surreptitious "head-hunting" has not even now entirely ceased among the wilder tribes. From Mandalay the journey up the river should, by all means, be made by cargo steamer.

Not only does the cargo boat stop at tiny villages and at many points where one sees no signs of a village, but she tows, lashed alongside, a barge nearly as large as herself. This barge and the great after-deck of the steamer form one big "department store." Space is rented to native merchants, who go back and forth each trip, supplying the native with everything he needs, from sarongs to betel.

Each merchant, in his few square feet of allotted space, arranges his wares exactly as in the little booth along the village street. Hundreds of natives swarm aboard at each stopping place, carrying baskets and bags for their purchases.

One is reminded every hour of the day from how many and diverse elements is to be welded the Burmese nation of the future. All originating from the same parent stock (except, perhaps, the Selung tribe), the various tribes have through the centuries contended for possession of lands, hunting and fishing grounds, for life of the simplest form, till their characteristics have become as distinctive as if of different races.

Kachins and Karens.

Here we find the stocky, picturesque Shans, with their bright plaids, heavily bedecked with brass and silver buttons, bells and other ornaments. The Kachin women wear a score or more belts of narrow hoops, stained black and falling over the hips in a manner to require frequent adjusting. They come from the Shan states to the east; are rather attractive in form and feature; eaters of lizards, of beetles, of snakes—in fact, of everything except human flesh, which is forbidden.

Here are (so-called) white Karens, heavy and stolid and very dirty, of fairer skin than the Burmese and with a more distinctly Mongolian eye. They take kindly to Christianity, whole villages at a time, as also do the red Karens, a tribe less numerous, small and wiry, with broad reddish faces. Heavy drinkers these, somber in mien, formerly very wild and savage, they have been reduced from stealers of men to stealers of cattle.

The females of one branch of the Karens and Palaungs wear brass rings around their necks, arms and legs, weighing, it is said, 50 to 60 pounds. The neck rings, as thick as the little finger, are put on the girl in infancy, four or five rings at first and others added as fast as she grows, till children of twenty keep the neck always stretched.

And so one journeys on and on, each day bringing new scenes, new types of people to study, and all at least 1,000 years behind the epoch in which we live. Everywhere are pagodas—great pagodas, little pagodas, all sorts and sizes of pagodas, for all the purses of the people who sought to "gain merit" in their building.

MRS. OSCAR DE NINA MAYER

To the flappers of the Bolivian jungles, Mrs. Oscar de Nina Mayer, former Cornell medical student, brought the boyish bob. When the natives saw her, on an engineering trip with her husband, they insisted she fashion their hair according to her style. When she snipped the tresses of a few, the style was heeded by most of the women of the wilds.

Delving Into Origin of Two-Dollar "Jinx"

Isn't it odd that the people of the United States should have come generally to regard the two-dollar bill as unlucky as to have boycotted it so that the government has been unable to make it perform the normal purpose which is its proper due?

The United States bureau of efficiency, as agency of the government, recently has investigated the origin of the superstition which led to this boycott. It believes it has found out where it started, although the proof is not positive.

The American dollar had its origin in the old Spanish piece of eight. Those coins afterward degenerated into pieces of seven, pieces of six. They fluctuated as to their silver content. There were pieces of ten, pieces of twelve, and, finally, pieces of thirteen.

This piece of thirteen was a huge silver coin of a value similar to the old English ten-shilling piece. It was, in fact, a silver two-dollar piece. But it was cursed by having the unlucky thirteen attached to it. It became unpopular, particularly in the area of the Caribbean.

When the new nation of the West evolved a dollar currency the superstition against the two-dollar piece survived. When only the newer note remained as a representative of the old coin of ill omen, the repute of bad luck still attached to it. The dollar had again become a piece of eight and the two-dollar bill was, consequently, no longer a piece of thirteen but a piece of sixteen. But all of this made no difference. It was unlucky and, being so, was scorned by many. The average individual, although he has no conscious faith in such superstitions, instinctively acts upon them to a degree. That degree has been sufficient to prevent the normal circulation of the two-dollar bill.

The only part of the United States where this superstition does not prevail is in New England. There the two-dollar bill circulates freely. In Canada there is no such superstition, and the two-dollar bill is an important element of the currency.—Chicago Tribune.

First Clasp Knives

Clasp or sprint knives became common about 1650. They first came from Flanders, which was the seat of many and varied industries even many years before this time. A knife-cleaning machine was invented in 1644 by George Kent of England.

Resisting Temptation

Many seek to fly temptations, and fall into them more grievously. By flight alone we cannot overcome; but by patience and true humility we are made stronger than all enemies. He who only turns aside from them outwardly, and does not pluck out the roots of them, will make but little advance; nay, temptations will sooner return to him, and he will find himself in a worse condition.—Thomas a Kempis.

Short Potato Crop Brought Wealth

White Potato Growers Harvested Over a Hundred Thousand Bushels Less This Year, Showing an Increase of $1.25 Per Bushel.

Washington, Dec. 26.—A short crop and a rising market have brought wealth to the American white potato growers, it was indicated in figures made public today by the department of agriculture.

This year's crop will total 323,243,000 bushels, the farm price of which on December 1, was $1.872 cents making the aggregate value of the crop $605,110,896.

Last year potato growers harvested 425,283,000 bushels, the farm price of which on December 1, 1924, was only 62.6 cents per bushel or $266,227,158 for the season's crop.

In other words, growers harvested 102,040,000 bushels less this year, but at the same time the price showed a difference of $1.246 cents per bushel.

Although Maine potato crops declined less than 10,000 bushels this year, the state still retained first place as the country's leading potatoe producer, with a production this year of 34,170,000 bushels as compared with 44,100,000 bushels last year. The farm price rose from 13 cents last year to $2 on December 1, last.

COULD NOT BELIEVE CONFLICT WAS OVER

Kansas Doughboys Considered News a Fake.

A long trudging column of mud-spattered Kansas doughboys wound in and out and up and down the hills above the valley of the Meuse. It was late afternoon of November 10, 1918, says the Emporia Gazette. The leaden sky was rapidly closing in on the cold, damp woods. The column came to a jerky halt and the men fell out of line, some sprawling at the edge of the road, some leaning back with wet packs propped up by their rifles, others squatting on their steel helmets in the mud of the road.

Far down the next hill came the sound of a whirring motor. A motorcycle came into view ahead, its wheels shooting spray aside as it tore through the slime and water. Instinctively the soldiers cleared the road. The rider was slowing his speed and as he passed the column he turned and shouted two words to the restless doughboys: "Guerre fini!" The men knew he meant the war was over.

But there was no shout, no joyous cheer. It was just another one of the many rumors that had been thrust at this plodding column all that day. They wouldn't believe it unless General Pershing himself told them—and, sure enough, the march was starting again. "Fall in," came the order, and the hobnails again took up the business of the day.

As darkness fell the column entered a partially ruined village. More rumors, more scoffing. Didn't the "top" give orders to be prepared to move out before morning? Billets were found in barns and houses; lights flickered about the rolling kitchens; the odor of damp wood burning quickly gave way to the sweetness of frying bacon and boiling coffee. In an hour the soldiers slept.

But no hurried order came to move on before dawn. The men slept late, and when they awoke the sun was shining. Still more rumors came with breakfast and afterward, while the men were fighting for places in the jostling line to the canteen with hope of buying something sweet. Maybe there was something to these rumors after all.

A few of the curious, looking doubtfully at the long line ahead of them, dropped out and started toward headquarters. As they arrived a sergeant-major was tacking a sheet of tissue paper on the outside of the brigade headquarters office. It was a dimly printed carbon copy of an army order, but it announced that "On the eleventh hour of 11 November hostilities would cease on all fronts."

The war was over!

Hurrying On

All this company is hurrying on, plainly in search of something badly wanted. Impressions? Yes. Impressions of a never ending road, a thousand farms, no-parking signs, successive towns passed through at 20 miles an hour, hack axles of no end of cars.

Thrills? Yes. Thrills of scenery worth stopping for if there were only time, of police on motor cycles masked as fellow tourists, of gorgeous sunsets well worth watching if the top were down, of getting home, at last, without a puncture.

Trophies? Yes. Trophies to bring back memories of this day of travel: grass baskets, toy balloons, and paper knives; bead bags, artificial fruit and seashells with an echo. A family of six will drive 200 miles to bring home three bulbs of grass with imitation butterflies inside. We are a great people for enjoying local fauna. It was a cynical German who guessed in war days, that France was fighting for Alsace-Lorraine, Britain for the Channel and America for souvenirs.

French Study Salesmanship

Foundation of a school of salesmanship on American lines, is contemplated by the Paris chamber of commerce as a result of a report by Andre Tardieu, who recommends the adaptation of American methods to the commercial conditions of France and the mentality of the French people. It is proposed to institute practical courses for girls wishing to become proficient saleswomen, and to train women to occupy executive positions, capable of organizing the systems of salesmanship of commercial houses and of instructing staffs in the new methods.

Wanted Information

A lecture was being delivered in a village hall. The folly of every form of gambling was to be exposed once and forever.

The chief speaker, stamping up and down the platform, specially erected for the occasion, launched forth into the very heights of rhetoric.

"Behold the serpent of gambling!" he shouted. "See his hungry fangs, ready to strike! But I will crush him!"

Down came his heel upon the imaginary viper. There was a reading of timbers and the speaker disappeared.

It was a select audience, however, and not a titter was heard as he scrambled into view. But the voice of a small boy broke the awful silence.

"Please, mister," he asked, meekly, "have you killed the serpent?"

The Gate

Betty, age three, and his sister Dorothy had been to the grocery. Upon their arrival home, Dorothy stopped to fasten the gate. Betty went into the house.

Her mother asked: "Betty, where is Dorothy?" Betty's reply was, "Oh, she's out buildin' up the gate."

Proper Self-Respect

The self-respecting man looks up to nobody, down upon nobody, but keeps his conscience clean enough to enable him to look everybody squarely in the face, and, when necessary, express his own honest opinion.—Gill.

Funeral Monday at 8:30 a. m., thence to the church of St. Ignatius, Carroll street and Rogers avenue where a requiem Mass will be offered for the repose of her soul. Interment in St. Mary's cemetery this city upon the arrival of the 2:10 West Shore train Monday afternoon.

HARGRAVES—In this city, December 24, Eugene Hargraves.

Funeral Monday at 2 p. m. from funeral parlors of W. N. Conner, 302 Fair street. Relatives and friends invited. Interment in the Chase cemetery at Sawkill.

In loving memory of Jane Miller who died two years ago today.

Dear Jane how we miss you, although God took you from us two years ago today. Friends may think the wound is healed, but little do they know the sorrow that is in our hearts concealed. And yet, dear one, we hope some day to be with you on that heavenly shore, where there is no sorrow but happiness forevermore.

Present Bowser With a Medal

Policeman Harold Bowser's Act of Bravery in Arresting Sitamore, a New York Gangster, Commended by Police Commissioners Thursday.

Policeman Harold F. Bowser was presented with a medal of valor on Thursday afternoon at a special meeting of the board of police commissioners for his bravery in arresting Sitamore, a noted New York gangster, on North Front street on Saturday afternoon, November 7. Sitamore, known as the man of many aliases, was captured by Policeman Bowser after a nationwide search.

Shortly after the capture of Sitamore the police board decided to present Officer Bowser with a medal and one was ordered struck off. It was received earlier in the week and a special meeting of the board was called for Thursday afternoon at which time Officer Bowser was instructed to appear before the commissioners.

The presentation was made by Mayor Morris Block, who commended the officer on his bravery. Chief of Police J. Allan Wood also spoke briefly.

The medal is of solid gold in three shades of that metal. On one side is impressed the seal of the city in the center of greenish gold, a plain band of light gold surrounding that and a deeper shade of burnished gold surrounding the plain band in the form of a wreath. The medal is suspended by a ribbon and plain gold bar and pin. On the bar is inscribed the officer's name and the words "Presented by the Board of Police Commissioners of the City of Kingston, December 25, 1925."

At the time of the arrest Officer Bowser was on duty on North Front street watching for the appearance of the auto containing Sitamore and his wife. As the auto approached the officer leaped on the running board with a drawn revolver which he jabbed into Sitamore's ribs, commanding him to stop the car and throw up his hands. The prisoner was then taken to police headquarters and later turned over to the police of New York city where he is being held in the Tombs awaiting a hearing on a charge of robbery of jewels from the Hotel Alamac in New York. He is also being questioned regarding the slaying of Dot King and Louise Lawson, Broadway butterflies, who were killed for their jewelry.

SOCIETY NOTES

Christmas Day Dinner.

Mrs. Eva Wood and sisters, the Misses Bessie and Ella N. Short, of Albany avenue, and brother, Eltinge F. Short of Nyack, were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Van Gaasbeck on O'Neil street on Christmas Day where a turkey dinner with all accessories was served. A Christmas tree laden with presents for everyone was thoroughly enjoyed by old and young alike.

Delightful Christmas Dance.

On Christmas night the Y. W. C. A. gym on Henry street was the scene of one of the most delightful social events held in Kingston in a long time, when the Christmas subscription dance was very largely attended by the young oldsters and the old youngsters of Kingston's society folk. Fred Van Etten's artistic genius had converted the place into a setting of Christmas beauty that would put to blush the most attractive Christmas card. White curtains at the windows, with holly wreaths, tinsel and red streamers hanging from the large overhead lights, sprays of holly, and standing guard at the back of the hall a beautiful and gaily lighted Christmas tree, in addition to the bower-like screening of Zita's orchestra, formed a most picturesque background for the happy faces, the beautiful costumes and the graceful dancers. During the evening there were two fancy dances given that were enthusiastically appreciated by all the guests—the Charleston was danced by Miss Beulah Phelps and Fehmer Chandler (home for the holidays) as a duet, and was followed by another eccentric dance as an encore, while Miss Phelps gave a graceful solo dance. Mrs. Daley served delicious refreshments from an unusually attractive table with its red candles and other decorations. The committee that is responsible for this year's thoroughly enjoyable subscription dances consists of G. Wallace Codwise, Harold King, Thomas Horton, Stephen Hiltebrant, John Schoonmaker, Jr., Richard Washburn of Saugerties and Charles A. Warren. Among the college boys and girls home for the holidays who attended the dance were Homer Teller, Jr., and Miss Teller; Miss Jane Baker and two brothers of Saugerties; Thomas Clearwater, Billy Fuller, Henry Osterhoudt, Miss Janet Fowler, Jack DeWitt, John Reel, William and Preston Hasbrouck of Stone Ridge and others.

Y. M. H. A. Meeting.

Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock there will be a regular meeting of the Y. M. H. A. at the club rooms on Post street. All members are requested to be present. An election of officers will take place at this meeting and others matters of importance will be discussed. A local speaker will give an address, after which a basketball team will be organized.

Highland School Board Organizes.

J. B. Lester was elected chairman of the Highland school board Thursday morning when the board met in the Highland High School to organize for the year. The former board also met with the new directors when the books were formally turned over to the incoming members. New bylaws for the board were discussed but no action was taken. Eugene Lovegue was chosen clerk.

No Hunting Around Ashokan

Hunters who go out in search of birds and quadrupeds should bear in mind section 222 of the state conservation law, which refers to the taking of birds and quadrupeds on certain public lands. This section of the law covers all of the Ashokan dam property owned by the city of New York. The penalty for violation of this section is a fine of $60.

"Section 222. Birds and quadrupeds shall not be taken on certain public lands. Birds and quadrupeds shall not be taken on or from lands purchased or condemned by any municipality within the state for the purpose of supplying any municipality with water and protecting same from pollution and contamination, or on or from any public highway, except public highways other than state or county highways within the forest preserve counties."

Entertainment at T. B. Hospital

While the patients at the Tuberculosis Hospital enjoyed their lighted Christmas tree, gifts from personal friends and members of their families and a fine Christmas dinner on Christmas day, their special Christmas entertainment and distribution of gifts from the people of Kingston will occur at the hospital Wednesday evening. At that time a group of Live Y-er Girls of the Y. W. C. A. will give a humorous one-act play and sing Christmas carols, and Mrs. Reed will distribute the gifts.

There are five degrees of volume. The program this evening will be by Metropolitan artists, with Christmas carols and band records.

Stribling Weds Society Girl

Young Stribling, Pugilist, Marries Clara Virginia Kinney, Daughter of a Wealthy and Notable Old Southern Family.

Macon, Ga., Dec. 26.—Like a leaf from a story book, or a reel from a Hollywood studio, reads the romance of W. L. (Young) Stribling) who makes his living as a fighting man in the squared arena, and Miss Clara Virginia Kinney, Macon society girl, daughter of a wealthy and distinguished old southern family.

Their romance was climaxed at noon today with a quiet wedding at the home of Miss Kinney. Stribling was 21 years old today.

Stribling, son of a team of vaudeville performers, battled his way into the limelight of the puglistic profession while still a beardless schoolboy in his teens. While other students in High School were playing football or baseball for sport, Stribling was attending classes in the day time, and bowling over seasoned professional heavyweight boxers at night, accumulating, meanwhile, a business like assortment of the coin of the realm.

Miss Kinney, an attractive brunette of 19, met Stribling in a class room at Lancer High School, just as he began to emerge from obscurity and win recognition as a boxer of standing. She is the granddaughter of Judge Dupont Guerry, one time president of Wesleyan College, and nominee for governor of Georgia. Her father is a wealthy cotton broker.

She will leave a luxurious home to share the fortunes of her fighting husband—and she is proud of his ability to fight.

"Strib won't give up his fighting after we are married," she said. "I wouldn't think of his doing that. He will never give it up, until he becomes the heavyweight champion of the world. And he will be that some day. I hope to help and encourage Strib in his profession. I distinctly approve of scientific boxing—it is a good, clean, manly sport, and there is much more to it than most people think."

Stribling has announced that he intends entering Georgia University and complete his education.

Stribling and his bride will start this afternoon for New York to spend a brief honeymoon.

Shirting on the Indelicate

A nervous curate, addressing a meeting on behalf of the Society for the Abolition of the Short Skirt, said: "I shall watch very closely the efforts in discarding—er—the society's efforts in doing away with this scanty apparel. May I appeal to those ladies here present, who may be wearing short skirts, to at once set a public example (after an embarrassed pause)—er—that is, of course, privately."

Electricity in Japan

Japanese capitalists are making plans for the hydro-electric development of the Chosbiako river of the Korean peninsula. It is estimated that this project will produce 247,000 kilowatts of electricity and that the total capital requirements will be about $200,000,000. The electricity produced will be used for light and power purposes as well as for various electro-chemical uses.

Old Musical Instrument

One authority says that the flute is doubtless one of the oldest musical instruments in the world. "The primitive cave dwellers made flutes of the leg-bones of birds and other animals; a record of such origin is being preserved in the Latin name tibia."

Christmas Eve at Home for Aged

Christmas Tree, Gifts, Carols Sung by Trained Choir and Other Features Made Eve a Delightful Time for Twelve Old Ladies.

Santa Claus certainly appreciated Sally More's letter about the Home for the Aged, which he received through the columns of The Freeman, and evidently made one of his very first stops there on Christmas Eve. It would be hard to imagine a more artistically decorated place than the downstairs rooms of the Home, with evergreens, holly, gay poinsettias, and lighted candles aplenty. And of course, there was a brilliantly lighted Christmas tree. In the pleasant dining room the long table for the family of twelve was not only set up but was handsomely decorated, each place having its own red candle lighted for the serving of refreshments, and a special gift.

The twelve big girls, Mr. and Mrs. Davis and their sons, home for the holidays, and a few guests were gathered in the living room when Robert Williams, organist of St. John's Episcopal Church, and the choir boys and the rector, the Rev. E. M. H. Knapp, arrived for a carol service. Even though it was a Christmas Eve in the life of every one of those lads, their faces shone with pleasure over the pleasure they were to give, and their sweet boy voices, which have been exquisitely trained by Mr. Williams, thrilled all who heard them sing the following carols, accompanied by Mr. Williams at the piano: Adeste Fideles, O Little Town of Bethlehem, Calm on the Listening Ear of Night, Gloria in Excelsis, sung beautifully by a trio of the boys; It Came Upon the Midnight Clear, Slumber Song of the Infant Jesus, Saw You Never in the Twilight, Shepherds Shake Off Your Drowsy Sleep, sung as a trio, each member of the trio singing a solo part and one of the finest numbers on the program; Angels from the Realms of Glory and Silent Night, Holy Night.

Before the singing of the two last carols, Philip Davis, who spent last Christmas in Bethlehem and had brought with him one of the large white candles burned at the celebration held by the Greek Church patriarchs at the manger, and which was lighted with due ceremony by Mrs. Davis, told the boys and the family of that celebration. And Mr. Davis proved himself to be a boy-hearted man whose admission to the preaching ranks of any church will mean real service.

After the program which brought so much happiness, the boys and the family and guests enjoyed hot cocoa and cakes and a good social time.

Incidentally Sally More did a real Pollyanna job when she wrote to Santa Claus, especially the potato end or it, and there will now be no danger of a potatoless winter at the Home for the Aged. And there were other equally appreciated gifts.

Real Forty-niner

Nearly half a hundred women have called John V. Weidemier husband, according to Mrs. Esther Wexler Brooks, who is suing him for divorce in Chicago.

Plants Introduced Here

Explorations in southern China, Burma and Siam resulted in the collection of trees from which chaulmoogra oil, a successful specific for leprosy, is obtained, and the establishing of these trees in the American tropics. Numerous varieties of Chinese chestnuts have been imported for testing for blight resistance in the hope that they will replace the rapidly disappearing American species. Many native Chinese apples, pears, cherries, plums and roses were also obtained, which, because of their vigor and hardiness, will be of special interest to plant breeders. Varieties of barley and wheat likely to prove of value at high altitudes or for growing under dry-farming conditions in the western states have also been introduced.

Heard Truth for Once

"I saw a mighty queer fight in town this afternoon," related Farmer Funblegate, upon his return from the county seat. "A fat young feller and a thin old one fit mighty near all around the public square tumbling down, rolling around getting up and whacking away at each other some more, and so on." "Mercy sakes!" ejaculated his wife. "What was the fight about?" "That was the funny part. Both said they weren't fighting for the principle of the thing, but 'cause one had cheated the other out of $2." —Kansas City Star.

Three Pine Trees

RICKARD WOULD STAGE KANSAS-CALLAHAN BOUT

New York, Dec. 26.—Jesse McMahon matchmaker for Tex Rickard, announced today that he has opened negotiations for a light weight championship bout in March between Rocky Kansas of Buffalo the new champion and Mushy Callahan, the California sensation. According to McMahon the eastern representative of Eddie Sears, manager of Callahan already has accepted terms and that he expects little trouble in lining up Kansas.

Callahan startled the boxing world recently by scoring the first knockout over Pal Moran, the New Orleans veteran. He is to give Pal another chance at the Crescent City in February, after which it is expected that he will start north for his proposed New York debut.

Glenna and Walter Will Play Abroad

All three major British golf titles will be in danger in 1926 from contemplated American invasions. Miss Glenna Collett, woman's national champion is already planning another trip abroad next spring.

Walter Hagen, it is reported will try again for the British open which he won last year and did not defend this year and which Jim Barnes won and will defend.

Next spring is also America's turn to visit England to play for the Walker cup.

SHERDEL CARDINAL FOR FIVE YEARS

National League's Leading Pitcher Began Career With Hanover Club.

Bill Sherdel who led the pitchers of the National league this year with sixteen victories and six defeats for a percentage of .727, has finished his eighth successive season as a member of the Cardinals. He has never played with any other major league club. He first joined the St. Louis team in 1918 and has remained with it ever since.

Sherdel started his career as a professional pitcher with the Hanover club of the Blue Ridge league in 1915. He won fifteen games and lost three while with that team during that season. For most of the following campaign he remained with the Hanover team. He won fourteen games and lost nine for that team that year and he was then sold to the Milwaukee club of the American association. While with the Milwaukee club during the remainder of that season he won two games and was beaten in five.

During all the season of 1917 Sherdel remained with the Milwaukee team. He scored nineteen victories and sixteen defeats while with that team during that campaign and at the end of the season he was obtained by the Cardinals. During his first year in major league baseball he won six games and was defeated in twelve.

During 1919 his second season as a member of the Cardinals, Sherdel won only five games and lost nine. In the following [illegible]

Christy Mathewson as a College Football Star

In an article entitled "Football" in the Princeton-Yale official program William Lyon Phelps, class of '87 at Yale pays the following tribute to Christy Mathewson, the late president of the Boston Braves and one-time great pitcher of the Giants.

"A word of tribute to Christy Mathewson. His fame as a pitcher dimmed his fine record as college football player. He played fullback for Bucknell university, and was proficient in every department of the game. In his senior year Walter Camp put him on the All-American football team. Years later Mr. Mathewson said that this gave him more pleasure, pride and satisfaction than his success as a professional pitcher.

"It was on the football field that Mr. Mathewson exhibited and developed those qualities of courage, fair play, generosity and sportsmanship that characterized his subsequent career."

Movies Feature Cricket as Played by J. Hobbs

England's hero of the hour, or of the season has gone in the movies. Slow motion, rapid action and just ordinary films are being shown of Jack Hobbs, cricketer supreme and holder of the world's centuries record.

Great crowds have been flocking to the cinemas of London and all through the provinces followers of the national pastime are fighting for seats in theatres where the style of the great player can be seen.

Experts have studied the slow motion pictures and have analyzed every move of the batsman. One critic said: "I saw Hobbs make four strokes—a drive past extra cover, a late cut, a hook and a back stroke to a good length ball—and although I always have regarded Hobbs as one of the most graceful of players I never realized the elegance of his movements as [illegible]

Clinton Quintet Takes Fast Game

Through the brilliant work of Cranston in the late minutes of the conflict the Clinton Seniors after having trailed their rivals during the entire match at Epworth Hall managed to brush the K. H. S. Second aside and give them their first defeat of the season, the final score reading, Clinton Avenue, 36; K. H. S., 33.

The Seconds were leading the Clinton lads in each of the three periods having the drop on their opponents by three or four points. But in the late minutes of the conflict the Clinton outfit discovering the loophole bore down hard on the High School team and started their registering machine into motion with the result that they snatched the match from the enemy by three points.

Slater led the point gathering for the Clinton outfit with thirteen markers. Cranston followed his teammate with twelve points, practically all his markers being seized in the final quarter. Bruhn and Baker scored most for the K. H. S. outfit with eleven and nine, respectively.

INDEPENDENTS EASILY WON FROM TRINITY

The Clinton Independents found it no task at all to defeat the Trinity Seniors, Thursday evening at Epworth Hall by a score of 50 to 11. The downtown team seldom broke through the Independent defense while the Clinton's clockwork passing game kept them ever up in front in the scoring. Niles and R. Chipp led the scoring with 17 markers each, for the Clintons.

FIRE PREVENTION.
Question—When a frame building burns down, what is left? Answer—The chimney alone, because it is built of brick. Chimneys are built of brick because they are fireproof. Why not construct the whole building of brick, that is Real Fire Prevention. Locals' Ability to Shoot Fouls Enables Them to Defeat Orange County All-Stars at Armory Christmas.

Although caging as many fields as the Kingston Tri-County League outfit the Orange County All-Stars fell short when performing at the penalty strip, Christmas night at the Armory and consequently fell victims before Jack Spalt's band, the holiday tilt ending; Kingston 22, All-Stars 14.

The Orange county lads were in all sort of trouble trying to find the basket for it was not until the first half of the battle was fourteen minutes old that they made their first stab at the scoreboard. When Hulse made the initial tally for his Orange tribe the local aggregation had already necked the scoreboard for eight points.

The locals keen shooting at the foul mark was their means of grabbing the conflict while on the other hand the visitors work along this line was rather rusty, comparatively. The Kingstonians made good ten of the fouls called on the enemy while the Orange county players looped but two out of eleven chances.

The locals had a stable grip on the conflict at half time, when the score read, 11 to 7. Although in the final period the Spaltites guided the leather from the playground once more than the losers they were again performing in a sparkling manner from the chalk line and as a result breasted the tape eight tallies in front of their opponents, this second period.

Hulse, the Orange county right forward was in all ways the outstanding player for the visiting aggregation whether on the defense or the offense. Hulse dropped through four of his team's six fields, making an aggregate tally of nine markers. Whenever the All-Stars gained possession of the ball it was almost invariably Hulse who had broken through the local's offense.

"Chet" Dolson was the hawkeye for the Kingston outfit shooting three doubles and four singles for a total of ten markers. Roy Van Buren was the next highest point getter for the locals with six points.

CLINTON SENIORS BEAT LEADER FIVE 31 TO 23

The Leader team received their second defeat in Epworth Hall Thursday evening when matched against the Clinton Seniors, the latter aggregation after learning the tactics of the printers easily defeating them by a 31 to 23 score. Newkirk led the shooting for the Epworth Hall team with nine markers while Slater followed with eight. Rainford and Snyder were the main point gatherers for the losing outfit with eight and seven respectively.

A Million Thrills to Thrill Millions!

Imagination has run riot in this fantastic masterpiece of exciting action. Thrill upon thrill mounts up into a crashing, superlative finish that is genuinely awe-inspiring. You will marvel at the magnificence of the Grand Ball, done in original colors, the scene of a gay Parisian revel; at the mad, wild march of infuriated thousands in pursuit of the Phantom, to exact revenge for his long sway of terror; at the beauty and tenderness of this enthralling love story; at the regal grandeur that permeates its every scene. A picture that the memory will cherish for years!
